

WINE

Topic Options

Cameron Hughes wine

anyone have experience with CHW? i just ordered a couple of bottles, curious if anyone has tried it and liked his lots so far.

cletus May 22, 2007

Permalink

Reply

I've had good luck with CH stuff. We haven't been as impressed with the Chardonnays as we have been with the various reds he's put out in the last year and a bit. As noted here, most of them are simply too young right now but do show promise. At $12 or so a bottle, they're a good value and I have high hopes for how well they'll age. Its definitely worth getting a few and cracking into a couple to see if you think you like where they're likely headed.

winesnob May 24, 2007

Permalink

Reply

Loved their Syrah which I purchased at Costco. Went back for some more, but was sold out. Their website will announce future distributions and in what areas, (Nocal, Socal, etc)

<http://www.chwine.com/>

winesnob May 24, 2007

Permalink

Reply

I just had my first experience with three of his wines (<http://tinyurl.com/2m5lgx>) and I was really impressed. Had the Sauvignon Blanc, the Meritage, and the Carneros sparkler. They tasted like wines that cost 2x the retail price. They weren't "mushy" like so many negociant wines can be here in the US, but really retained distinctive flavor profiles. Sign up for their email newsletter, so you can get your hands on wine when they're released because they sell out FAST.

drdebbs June 01, 2007

Permalink

Reply

Had the SB tonight - well worth purchasing. Obviously a sauvignon blanc, with a grassy but not overbearing character. Clean, crisp, juicy acidity and lots of concentrated grapefruit and wet stones. Nice aromas, too. I went back to the Alhambra Costco today to get the lot 29 but they were all gone.. still a good quantity of lots 26 and 34, though. This lot 26 sauvignon blanc is a good one.

monkuboy June 03, 2007

Permalink

Reply